Equity Market Outlook

- The Indian equity markets moved up sharply at the beginning of the month on the back of strong foreign flows. However, the markets closed flat towards the end of April 2010 on account of global uncertainty regarding sovereign debt defaults.
- While the strong Industrial Production (IP) growth being seen over many months saw some moderation, inflation moderated as well, for the time being staying in single digits. The RBI has for sometime been grappling with conflicting objectives of containing inflation while also managing the governments borrowing program in a way so that the equity and fixed income markets do not get negatively affected. In its most recent policy review, it decided to raise the key policy rates in line with market expectations (by 25 basis points each). This was viewed positively by the market as on one hand the RBI maintained its stand on tackling inflation and on the other hand it has handled the pressing issue in a delicate manner.
- The equity markets remained focused on the quarterly earnings that are being reported by corporates. They have so far remained in line with market expectations, helped also by a low base effect. The markets remain fairly valued keeping the FY11 earnings in mind. Strong earnings growth into the next couple of years should underpin steady equity market performance. While the markets could see some correction in the near term on account of fiscal debt and rising oil price, the correction should get contained due to presence of strong earning years ahead.
- Meanwhile, the India Meteorological Department has forecasted 2010 to be a normal rainfall year for the country as a whole. However, apart from just the quantum of rainfall, the spatial and temporal distribution of rainfall would also be important. The oil price has been moving up steadily, and given the governments borrowing program, could put some pressure on the fiscal debt of the country. Earnings upgrades could provide near/medium term upside while risk of sovereign default and fragility of the global economy could take the markets downwards. Low interest rate scenario being maintained globally should ensure steady inflows into emerging markets.
